INTRODUCTION

The primary objective of this publication is to acquaint persons in the state who are interested in tourism development with the various sources of information and assistance available to them.

The directory categorizes organizations under one of four major sections:

1. governmental agencies offering major tourism assistance services;
2. nongovernmental agencies offering major tourism assistance services;
3. governmental agencies offering minor tourism assistance services; and
4. nongovernmental agencies offering minor tourism assistance services.

Commercial, profit-making firms are excluded from this publication.

Three appendices serve as quick references to organizations mentioned in the text. Sources of additional information are included at the end of each organization's entry.

Information included in the directory on each organization was obtained from available literature and directly from the organizations themselves. Only those activities related to tourism are given for all organizations including those in which tourism assistance activities play a minor or secondary role in the overall work program.

Although every effort was made to include all organizations offering a service or assistance, some may have been inadvertently omitted. These organizations are encouraged to contact the authors if they are interested in being included in future editions of the directory.

6. The J. Z. George Law Office was the office of James Z. George, Chief Justice of the Mississippi State Supreme Court, U. S. Senator, and principal author of the 1890 Mississippi State Constitution.
7. Malmaison Site is the site for the Home of Greenwood Leflore; the house burned in 1942.
8. Merrill's Store is reputedly the oldest brick structure in Carrollton.
9. Eureka Masonic College (O. E. S. Shrine) was built in 1847 and is recognized by the Eastern Star organization as its birthplace.
10. The Faulkner House, Rowan Oak, was the home of Nobel and Pulitzer Prize author William Faulkner; it is a National Historic Landmark.
11. Brice's Cross Roads National Battlefield Site commemorates the victory won by General Nathan Bedford Forrest on June 1, 1864.
12. The Cotton Gin Port Site on the Tombigbee River is one Tupelo, fought on July 14, 1864.
13. The Cotton Gin Port Site on the Tombigbee River is one of the three possible locations where the DeSoto expedition may have crossed the river in the fall of 1540; this was the terminus of the Gaines Trace and the site of major steamboat shipping.
14. The S. D. Lee House was built in the mid-1840s; it became the home of Stephen D. Lee in 1890.
15. The Wesson Hotel was built circa 1877; it was originally known as the Richardson House for its builder and son of the president of Mississippi Mills, John P. Richardson.
16. The Big Black River Battlefield is the site of a battle fought on May 17, 1863, after Confederate forces withdrew from Champion Hill.
17. Capitol Green, in Jackson, was designed in 1822 as part of the original city plan.
18. Champion Hill Battlefield played a crucial role in the Vicksburg campaign. Strategically, this battle was among the most decisive military events of the Civil War.
19. City Hall in Jackson has served as the seat of the city's government since 1847.
20. The Civil War earthworks in Battlefield Park are the most tangible remains of extensive fortifications erected around Jackson during the Civil War.
21. The Governor's Mansion in Jackson has been the official residence of Mississippi governors since 1842.
22. Manship House was built circa 1857 for Charles Manship, who, as mayor, surrendered the city of Jackson to General William T. Sherman on July 16, 1863. It is an excellent example of Gothic Revival architecture and one of the few Jackson houses to survive the Civil War.
23. New Capitol in Jackson has been the seat of Mississippi State Government since 1903.
24. Old Capitol in Jackson was the seat of Mississippi State Government from 1839–1903; the building now houses the State Historical Museum.
25. Raymond Battlefield is the site of the defeat of Confederate forces under General John Gregg by Union General McPherson's Corps.
26. Chapel of the Cross was built 1850–1852 as a memorial to John T. Johnston. It is an outstanding example of nineteenth-century Gothic Revival church architecture.
27. Balfour House, home of Emma Balfour, who kept a detailed diary chronicling the siege of Vicksburg, was built circa 1836.
28. Pemberton House was the headquarters of General John C. Pemberton during the siege of Vicksburg. It is a National Historic Landmark.
29. The Old Courthouse in Vicksburg is the symbol of Confederate resistance in the Vicksburg Campaign of 1862–1863; it is a National Historic Landmark.
30. Planters Hall was built circa 1834, and now houses the Vicksburg branch of the Planters Bank of the State of Mississippi.
31. Vicksburg National Military Park is the site of the decisive campaign in the West during the Civil War.
32. Snyder's Bluff is the site of Fort Saint Peter, erected by the French in 1719 and destroyed by Indians in 1729. It was reoccupied in 1862 by Confederate forces who erected batteries and fortifications referred to as Fort Snyder. It was evacuated when Vicksburg was besieged and controlled by Federal forces until the close of the war.
33. Merrehope is a 26-room Academic Revival mansion evolved (circa 1904) from a late nineteenth century two-story home.
34. Grand Opera House was built in 1890 and was used as an opera house and music hall until circa 1909.
35. D'Evereaux is one of Mississippi's best examples of Greek Revival architecture, built circa 1840.
36. Jefferson College was incorporated in 1802 and opened for classes in 1811; its restoration began in 1972.
37. Longwood is the largest and most elaborate of the octagon houses built in the United States; it is a National Historic Landmark.
38. Kings Tavern was built circa 1789 and is probably the oldest building in Natchez. It served as the mail and stagecoach station at the end of the Natchez Trace.
39. Natchez Bluffs and Under-the-Hill District includes the site of the second Fort Rosalie, the city promenade/park established during the administration of Spanish Governor Manuel Gayoso de Lemos, and the nineteenth-century flatboat-steamboat landing on the Mississippi.
40. Dunleith was built circa 1855 by General Charles C. Dahlgren on the site of an earlier house. It is an excellent example of Greek Revival mode.
41. Van Dorn House was built circa 1820 by the father of Confederate General Earl Van Dorn.
42. Port Gibson Battlefield is the site of an 1863 assault on Federal troops under Major General Ulysses S. Grant by Confederate forces led by Brigadier General John S. Bowen.
43. Rocky Springs was a settlement as early as 1792 on the Old Natchez Trace.
44. The Old Natchez Trace in Claiborne County was developed to provide a quick and efficient communications route between the nation's capital and the capital of the Mississippi Territory.
45. Grand Gulf Military State Park was the scene of considerable military activity during the Federal campaign to capture Vicksburg. The existing earthworks are well preserved.
46. Ruins of Windsor are an example of Residential Greek Revival architecture. It was built in 1861 and burned in 1890.

48. Mount Locust Historic House was built circa 1789 as a one-room cabin. It was restored and is now maintained by the Natchez Trace Parkway.
49. The Old Natchez Trace in Jefferson County consists of two segments, one a three-mile section in front of Mount Locust.
50. The second section of the Old Natchez Trace in Jefferson County is a 3.5-mile section north of Cole Creek.
51. The Rodney Presbyterian Church was chartered in 1828; the present structure was erected circa 1832. Restoration of this building has been initiated by the Rodney Foundation and the state of Mississippi.
52. Springfield Plantation House was built by Thomas Green, Jr. Tradition has it that Andrew Jackson married Rachel Robards at the site or in the vicinity in 1791.
53. Longino House was built circa 1884. It was occupied until 1888 by A. H. Longino, who later became the 35th Governor of Mississippi.

54. Beauvoir was the home of Jefferson Davis, 1877–1889. It was here that he wrote Rise and Fall of the Confederate Government.
55. Fort Massachusetts on Ship Island was built circa 1859–1863; its construction was authorized by Jefferson Davis, Secretary of War. It is now part of the Gulf Islands National Seashore.
56. Old Spanish Fort was built 1721. It is reputedly the oldest building in the lower Mississippi Valley.
57. The U. S. S. Cairo, now located at Ingalls Shipyard in Pascagoula, was the first victim of an electrically activated torpedo in Naval history. The ship participated in the campaign to take Vicksburg.
58. Ford House was the scene of the Pearl River Convention of 1815 and was built circa 1810.
59. Biloxi Garden Center was owned by John Henley, Civil War mayor of Biloxi, from 1850–1872.
60. Milner House (Grasslawn) was built prior to the Civil War by Dr. Hiram Alexander Roberts. It was the home of Joseph William Milner circa 1940–1950, who achieved major public improvements for Gulfport during his lengthy mayoralty.
61. Hollywood Site is a well-preserved site with earthen enclosures. It is the possible site of Quiz-Quiz, the prehistoric town visited by DeSoto.
62. Pharr Mounds have been labeled Deasonville on the basis of the preponderance of cord paddle marked pottery found there.
63. Bear Creek Site was occupied during the Mississippian period.
64. Teoc Creek Site is the second oldest Poverty Point culture site in the Southeastern region, dating circa 1392 B.C.
65. Bynum Mounds were first occupied circa 700 A.D.; they were later reoccupied by the historic Chickasaw people.
66. Chickasaw Village Site was where Chickasaw Indians were first noted by the chroniclers of DeSoto's expedition during the winter of 1540–41. The Treaty of Pontotoc Creek in 1837 forced the Chickasaws to move to Oklahoma.
67. Berry Mound is of the Late Woodland period.
68. Dupree Mound serves as a source for some of the key Plaquemine culture pottery types.
69. Floyd Mound contains information on the archaeology of the Big Black River Valley.
70. Pocahontas Mound A is important in Plaquemine culture characteristics.
71. Pocahontas Mound B is of Late Woodland and Early Mississippian periods.
72. Boyd Mounds in Ridgeland are Deasonville (300–500 A.D.) or Bayland (500–700 A.D.)
73. Holly Bluff Site is an archaeological site for the Lake George phase of the Mississippian culture and is a National Historic Landmark.
74. Emerald Mound, adjacent to the Natchez Trace Parkway, is the second largest temple mound in the United States.
75. The Grand Village of the Natchez, a National Historic Landmark, is now being archaeologically restored.

77. Governor's Mansion has been the official residence of governors since 1842 and is a National Historic Landmark.
78. Parchman Place Site is the type site for the Parchman phase, circa 1450 A.D. Three platform mounds survive, along with remnants of other smaller mounds.
79. Sacred Heart Roman Catholic Church was the setting in 1894 for the christening of the future Most Reverend Bishop Charles P. Greco, Bishop of the Diocese of Alexandria (Louisiana). Bishop Greco was the first Mississippian to become a Roman Catholic Bishop. Built around 1868, the church is an outstanding example of carpenter gothic church architecture.
80. Vicksburg Siege Cave is thought to be the last remaining Civil War cave in Vicksburg.
81. Casey Jones Wreck Site is the site of the wreck in which Casey Jones, colorful Illinois Central engineer, was killed.
82. Magnolia Hotel, constructed in 1847, is thought to be the oldest hotel structure surviving on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.
83. Dancing Rabbit Creek Treaty Site was the site of the signing on September 27, 1830, of the Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek, which provided for the ceding of the remaining Choctaw land in Mississippi to the United States Government.
84. Jaketown Site is one of the most significant archaeological sites in Mississippi because of its long, almost continuous occupation through part of the Poverty Point period (circa 1700 B.C. – 400 B.C.) and all subsequent archaeological periods of the Lower Mississippi Valley.
85. Margaret Emilie, built around 1912 was originally named Dorothy Hilzheim.
86. Chickasaw Bayou Battlefield is the site of the first land engagement in the numerous Federal attempts to capture Vicksburg.
87. Nanih Waiya Mound and Village Site is the site of archaeological collections which indicate an occupation span of from approximately the time of Christ until after white contact. The large flat-topped mound was probably built during the Mississippian period.
88. Old Tishomingo County Courthouse, built around 1888–1889, served as the courthouse for Tishomingo County until 1971.
89. Nanih Waiya Cave Mound is a natural geological formation considered by many present-day Mississippi Choctaws to be the "Mother Mound."
90. Inzer Site is an archaeological site whose surface collections indicate prehistoric occupation from circa 500 B.C. A temple mound is the site's most prominent feature.
91. Gillis House, built prior to 1838, is one of the few houses remaining from the early nineteenth century to illustrate the importance of Biloxi as a summer home for New Orleans residents whose wealth was based on cotton speculation.
92. Confederate Earthworks are tangible evidences of the defenses constructed by the Confederates for the protection of the river crossings and the Mississippi and the Mississippi Central and Mississippi-Tennessee Railroads at Grenada.
93. Fort Pemberton is the site of the Confederate fortifications which thwarted the Union advance in the Yazoo Pass Expedition. The Star of the West was scuttled in the Tallahatchie River behind the fort to obstruct the channel.
94. Monmouth was built circa 1820 by John Hankinson, a relation of the prominent Schuyler family of New York. Acquired by John Anthony Quitman in 1826, who served in the State Legislature, the United States House of Representatives, and as Governor of the State of Mississippi.
95. Boyd House is a one-story frame and clapboard Greek Revival dwelling built circa 1856 for James H. Boyd, Mayor of Jackson, 1842–1844, 1850, 1858.
96. Yazoo Pass Levee was utilized to link the Mississippi, Coldwater, Tallahatchie, and Yazoo rivers prior to the construction of a levee between Moon Lake and the Mississippi River in 1856.
97. Jackson Landing Site is probably the largest extant prehistoric earthwork in Mississippi. Earliest construction stages have been dated at 400 B.C.
98. Millsaps-Buie House was built circa 1888 for Major Reuben Webster Millsaps, one of Mississippi's leading financiers and philanthropists during the post Civil War period. His initial endowment stimulated the establishment of Millsaps College.
99. Treaty of Pontotoc Site is the site of the Chickasaw Council House, where the Treaty of Pontotoc was signed on October 20, 1832. By the terms of this treaty, the Chickasaw ceded to the United States all of their remaining lands east of the Mississippi River.
100. Centers Creek Mound is one of the finest Coles Creek (circa 700 A.D.—1000 A.D.) sites in Mississippi.
101. Biloxi Lighthouse, built 1848, is the most prominent landmark on the Mississippi Gulf Coast.
102. Winterville Site is a large Mississippian period ceremonial site. It represents the zenith of prehistoric developments in that part of the Mississippi Valley. It was here that the initial contact occurred between the Plaquemine culture to the south and the Mississippian culture to the north. Most of the mounds on the site were probably constructed somewhere between 1200–1400 A.D.
103. Peyton House was built 1831–1834 by John B. Peyton, one of the early settlers of central Mississippi; and, according to his obituary, the founder of Raymond.
104. Civil War Earthworks, Tallahatchie Crossing were erected in December, 1862, by Major General James B. McPherson for the purpose of controlling the vital crossing of the Tallahatchie on the Old Holly Springs-Oxford Road.

105. Mount Holly was built circa 1855 by Margaret Johnson Erwin Dudley, daughter of Henry Johnson, one of the early, large landholders in the Delta, and later owned by William Hezekiah Foote and Huger Lee Foote, prominent planters and politicians.
106. United States District Courthouse was the first federal building in Forrest County, completed in 1910.
107. Catledge Archaeological Site mounds represent the Three Coles Creek period (circa 950 A.D.) and are laid out to form perfect isosceles triangle.
108. Fort Adams Site, constructed in 1799 for control of military and commercial traffic on the Mississippi River, was the United States outpost and port of entry on the border of Spanish territory.
109. Davis' Mills Battle Site was the scene of December 21, 1862, defense by a Federal garrison of the Mississippi Central Railroad trestle over Wolf River, 20 miles north of Holly Springs.
110. Amite County Courthouse is an outstanding combination of vernacular architecture and the Federal style. This building has been the site of much social and political activity in Amite County.
111. Waverly was built circa 1852 by George Hampton Young, an influential planter and local politician. The two-story, wing pavilion house still contains much of its original decorations, including balusters, mantel, and chandeliers. It is an excellent representative of a plantation complex of its time. The building housed Confederate officers and was the site of the organization of the first national fox hunting association.
112. Mistletoe was built in 1807 by John Bisland as a wedding gift for his son Peter. This is the earliest of three extant houses associated with the Bisland family, which was influential in the Pine Ridge and Natchez areas. The house is one of the earliest and best-preserved examples of the open-back-hall floor plan so popular in Mississippi in this era.
113. John Nelson Site is one of the largest Late Archaic sites (circa 1000 B.C.) in Mississippi.
114. Arlington is one of four Federal style villas which established basic form for later homes in Natchez.
115. Montaigne was built 1854-1855 for Confederate General William Thompson Martin (1823-1910) and wife, Margaret Dunlop Conner Martin, on land that had been part of the historic "Linden" tract. Montaigne is significant as the former home of one of five Mississippians who achieved the rank of Major General in the Confederate army.
116. Site of Fort Dearborn was established as a fortification for U. S. troops in 1802-1803 near the territorial capital of Washington, Mississippi.
117. Montauk Mound, located between Deer Creek and U. S. Highway 61, was the terminating point of a joint army and navy expedition by Federal forces of Major General William T. Sherman and Acting Rear Admiral David D. Porter to reach the Yazoo River by way of a series of creeks and bayous. This endeavor, if successful, would have allowed them to silence the guns of Snyder's Bluff on the Yazoo River north of Vicksburg.
118. Alligator Mounds is considered to be significant archaeologically because of its potential for answering questions on the economic base and settlement patterns of several prehistoric cultures represented there.
119. Federal Fortifications along Bear Creek are a part of the extensive works erected by the Federal army during the summer of 1863. They were to serve as a cordon of an outer perimeter to protect the rear of the Federal army laying siege to Vicksburg.
120. Williamsburg is known historically as the John Baynton House. Built by Natchez land speculator, John Baynton, between 1830 and 1840, the house later became the home of the Junkin family, antecedents of John R. Junkin, the late Speaker of the Mississippi House of Representatives.
121. L&N Railroad Depot was constructed in 1904 to replace an earlier station. It was enlarged in 1918 and continued to serve traffic along the L&N Railroad's Mobile to New Orleans coastal route until passenger service was discontinued in 1971.
122. Rosemont, built between 1810 and 1817, is a typical specimen of territorial Mississippi plantation architecture. The house is particularly significant for its association with Jefferson Davis, by whose parents the house was built and whose relatives lived there until 1896.
123. Oakland Chapel is a significant example of Greek Revival architecture in the temple form. Begun in 1838 as the main building of Oakland College, site is now occupied by Alcorn State University.
124. Stanton Hall was built between 1851 and 1857 by Frederick Stanton, an Irishman, and is one of the state's finest examples of Greek Revival architecture.
125. Connelly's Tavern, built during the Spanish rule, is a two-story structure with double galleries and canted roof. It is located on Ellicot's Hill overlooking the Mississippi River. A moat and drawbridge are other unique features of this structure.
126. Melrose was constructed around 1845 for John T. McMurrin. The house is a somewhat austere example of Greek Revival domestic architecture and is particularly important as no major structural changes have been made.
127. Auburn is considered one of the finest buildings in Natchez. Built by Levi Weeks in 1812 for Lyman Harding, this neoclassical house is dominated by a giant portico with Roman Ionic columns.
128. Ammadelle was begun in 1859 by Thomas Pegués and designed by the English architect, Calvert Vaux.
129. Commercial Bank Building, chartered in 1833, was required to have a banker's residence included as part of the building for security measures.
130. Buena Vista Cotton Gin was built around 1848 and converted to steam power between 1857 and 1861. It was owned by James Watson, a wealthy planter of Claiborne County. One of the few cotton gins to employ steam power prior to the Civil War, this is the only example of which above-ground remains exist.
131. Wilsford (Wilford) Site consists of a prehistoric village site as well as a small, rectangular platform mound. The apparent method of constructing these houses is unusual, there being nothing comparable mentioned in the archaeological literature of the area.
132. Oliver Site reveals two distinct occupations of the area, the Coahoma (Baytown period) and the Hushpuckena-Oliver (Mississippian period). No evidence of transition from one period to the other has been found.
133. Thomas Batchelor House is one of the finest and most sophisticated structures erected during the 1820's and 1830's in southwest Mississippi. The Federalist house exemplifies the popularity this style enjoyed prior to the emergence of Greek Revival in this area.
134. Civil War Earthworks on Bailey Hill are the best preserved fortifications of their kind in Jackson.
135. Norman Site consists of a village occupation area of approximately 40 acres comprising three small mounds. This site has one of the most varied accumulations of prehistoric pottery types in the Yazoo Basin, especially those types associated with the Tchula period.
136. Montgomery Hall, constructed in 1902, is a manifestation of the Beaux Arts classicism as it was interpreted particularly throughout the southern states. Montgomery Hall is historically significant as one of the oldest and most focal buildings on the Mississippi State University campus. The structure is also significant for its position in the history of the region's architecture.
137. Sub Rosa is a good example of the vernacular form of the Greek Revival style brought to Mississippi by immigrants from the Carolinas. Built by John and Margaret Greaves after 1852, the house is a two-story frame structure with a five-bay facade.
138. Humber Site is a Late Mississippian period (circa 1400-1700 A. D.) village and cemetery complex occupying two miles of a natural levee in west central Coahoma County. Impressive in size, the site represents the florescence of native American cultural achievement north of Mexico. At least two native populations are represented at this site.
139. J. M. Stone Cotton Mill was designed by Stewart W. Cramer in 1902 and named for former governor and second president of Mississippi State Agricultural and Mechanical College, John M. Stone.

140. The Burrus House—"Hollywood," although in a state of deterioration, is the only extant "mansion type" structure remaining in Bolivar County. Construction began on the house in 1858 by John C. Burrus, who was among the first to settle in the county when lands were opened by the Treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek in 1830.
141. The McNutt House is the only structure remaining in the state associated with Alexander Gallatin McNutt, twelfth Governor of the State of Mississippi. The building was begun in 1826.
142. Flowerree was constructed in 1877 and contains some of the finest plasterwork of the High Victorian age in Mississippi. Built by Colonel Charles C. Flowerree, who was the youngest colonel in the Confederate Army, the structure is a two-story, five-bay house.
143. Erwin House was constructed circa 1830 by Junius R. Ward. It is believed to be the oldest extant structure remaining in the county.
144. The Hester-Standifer Creek Site is a large multicomponent site covering approximately six acres. Excavations indicate a fairly continuous and heavy occupation from the Late Paleo Indian period through the Early Archaic period.
145. Old Robinson Road-Noxubee National Wildlife Refuge was named for its surveyor, Raymond Robinson, and was constructed, beginning in 1821, to decrease by one-half the time and distance between the lands opened to settlement in 1816 in the Columbus area and the capitol in Jackson.
146. Textile Building, constructed in 1900 to house the ambitious but short-lived Textile School of what was then Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, is the oldest extant academic building on the Mississippi State University campus as well as a significant monument in the history of industrialization, and particularly of cotton manufacturing, in Mississippi.
147. Star of the West, built in 1852, was recipient of the first shot fired in the American Civil War in Charleston Harbor on January 9, 1861.
148. Moore's Creek Site is one of only two known undisturbed archaeological sites in Alcorn County and one of three known sites in northeast Mississippi representing the Middle Archaic period.
149. Lawson Site is a 200' x 100' oval shaped midden containing two feet of undisturbed artifactual material. Tests revealed that the bulk of the deposit is of the Archaic period with a thin bottom stratum representing Early Archaic occupation.
150. L.Q.C. Lamar House, built circa 1856, was purchased by Lamar's wife in 1868. The house was occupied by Lamar until 1888 when he was appointed by President Cleveland to the Supreme Court. His residency here spanned his career as congressman, senator, and Secretary of the Interior.
151. Owl Creek Site was first described by Rush Nutt in the early 1800's as seven mounds encircled by a ditch. In 1935, Moreau Chambers reported five mounds only. Archaeological work suggests that the Owl Creek Site was a large palisaded village of the Mississippian Culture with an earlier Miller II occupation.
152. Curlee House is a Greek Revival house built circa 1857. Following the Battle of Shiloh, the house was the headquarters of Confederate generals Braxton Bragg and Earl Van Dorn and Union General Halleck.
153. St. Peter's Episcopal Church is of great importance as the oldest religious structure in Oxford and a once-designated "Cathedral Church" of the Episcopal Diocese of Mississippi. The congregation of the Church was organized in 1851 and by 1860 had completed the present church structure which follows the designs of nineteenth-century American architect Richard Upjohn. St. Peter's history is also enhanced by a number of prominent men who have served or worshipped here.
154. Hope Farm is one of the few surviving eighteenth-century structures in Mississippi. Hope Farm has retained its general character as a structure of the Spanish Provincial period in Mississippi. The house is presently owned by Mr. and Mrs. J. Balfour Miller. Mrs. Miller is the founder of the Natchez Pilgrimage.
155. Mound Cemetery Site consists of a single conical burial mound, which stands about 20 feet high and is approximately 125 feet in diameter. Construction probably took place during the Miller II period (A. D. 1-300). As a Miller II burial site the mound could be invaluable in clarifying socioreligious practices and subsistence-settlement systems of this period.
156. B. S. Ricks Memorial Library houses the collections of the Yazoo Library Association which was founded in 1838. The building was constructed in 1900.
158. The Whaley Site could provide additional knowledge of the Baytown and Mississippian periods.
159. The Lyon's Bluff Site consists of an earthen mound approximately 20 feet high and surrounding village area. Its mound, constructed during the late prehistoric period, is one of the largest Mississippian mounds in its section of Mississippi.
160. The Neill Archaeological Site is primarily significant because of its deep, undisturbed midden, a buildup of approximately 800 years.
161. Battle of Corinth Site-Confederate Assault Position. The Battle of Corinth occurred on October 3-4, 1862, when Major General Sterling Price joined General Earl Van Dorn, CSA, to attack the Federal garrison at Corinth under the command of Major General William S. Rosecrans. Battery Powell was captured by the Confederates, but failure to capture Battery Robinette forced a retreat to Hatchie Bridge.
163. The Lane's Chapel Site consists of a large, well-preserved conical mound, measuring 100 feet in diameter and 12 feet high. The site is significant because it may be able to shed some light on the culture of its builders, probably prehistoric people of the Mississippian period.
164. The Smith Park Architectural District contains a high concentration of significant buildings illustrating architectural tastes during the period 1840-1940. Of the 22 buildings contained within the district, 16 are judged to be of architectural significance.
165. Beaver Dam Archaeological Site (Holly Grove Site) is the only site of its combined geological and cultural type presently recorded in the northern Yazoo Basin. Beaver Dam was occupied by several groups at different intervals of time, including very brief use by peoples of the Marksville, Baytown, and Mississippian periods. However, the heaviest occupation seems to have been in the Late Paleo-Indian-Early Archaic periods, circa 9,000 to 5,000 years ago.
166. Old United States Post Office and Courthouse Building was completed in 1887 and is a Romanesque Revival structure, a style rarely adopted for Mississippi buildings.
167. The Lavelle Site contains approximately 10 to 20 centimeters of undisturbed cultural deposits, making it one of the few prehistoric sites in Newton County which has not been destroyed by agriculture. Cultural materials collected from the site indicate that it was an Early or Middle Woodland period campsite.
169. The Isaiah T. Montgomery House, located in the Mississippi Delta town of Mound Bayou, is a red brick, two-story structure built over a full above-grade basement. Built circa 1910, this was the residence of one of Mississippi's early black leaders. Montgomery, a former slave of Jefferson Davis, founded the all-black town of Mound Bayou to afford blacks the opportunity to exercise self-government.
170. The Donelson House was the Bolivar County plantation of Andrew Jackson Donelson (1799-1871), a prominent soldier, lawyer, politician, diplomat, and nephew of President Andrew Jackson.

171. The William Johnson House is a two and one-half story, three-bay brick structure, constructed between 1840–1841 by William Johnson, "The Barber of Natchez," a free black whose diaries, written between 1835–51, are highly significant documents which chronicle his professional and financial activities in antebellum Natchez.
172. Cedar Grove was built for John Alexander Klein in 1840. It is a good example of Greek Revival domestic design.
173. Oakland is a one-story, brick, Greek Revival house constructed between 1838 and 1844 by Horatio Sprague Eustis on land given to his wife by her father, Henry Chotard. In 1858 it became the residence of John Minor who is remembered for his pro-Union sympathies during the Civil War.
174. The Rowland Site is one of the few undisturbed archaeological sites in Mississippi. Investigation could recover information about the floral and faunal resources utilized by the inhabitants as well as village and individual house plans.*
175. The Black Site is a combination village and mound site and could provide information pertaining to both mound construction and the pattern of houses in relation to it.*
176. The Elms is one of the oldest and most unusual "suburban villas" in Natchez. It is a highly significant example of "picturesque eclecticism" achieved through a variety of mass and irregular outline.
177. The Edwards Hotel is significant for its excellent design and its association with the political and social life of the capital city. The structure and form of the building are derived from the commercial style of the late-nineteenth century, though ornamented with Neoclassical Revival motifs.
178. Rosalie is one of the earliest fully developed and most prominent "suburban villas" in Natchez and is considered a highly significant example of Neoclassical domestic architecture. In addition, the mansion is locally significant as the headquarters of the Federal Army during its occupation of Natchez.*
179. Federal Siege Trench is the best-preserved Civil War earthwork remaining from the Siege of Corinth. It was constructed as part of the Federal offensive attempting to encircle the town and its Confederate garrison.
181. Gloucester is one of the oldest and best-preserved suburban mansions in the Natchez region and is considered one of the best examples of Neoclassical domestic architecture in the state. In addition, Gloucester is the only structure in Mississippi associated with its first territorial governor, Winthrop Sargent. The Gloucester Cemetery is the only remaining site associated with Seargent S. Prentiss, an important figure in the early political history of the state and one of its celebrated orators.
182. Town of Colbert and the Town of Barton contain the well-preserved archaeological remains of two of the earliest towns established in the portion of old Lowndes County west of the Tombigbee River after that area was opened for settlement by the Treaty of Pontotoc in 1832.*
183. Fair Oaks, built circa 1822, has achieved local prominence as the residence of several important families of the fashionable Second Creek neighborhood six miles south of Natchez. In addition, the structure is architecturally significant as an interesting vernacular form possessed of sophisticated, well-calculated, and skillfully joined interior woodwork.
184. Battery Williams is the best preserved of Corinth's Federal fortifications.
185. Tullis House is one of the most substantial and elaborate of the vacation homes constructed on the Mississippi Gulf Coast during the early peak period of the area's popularity in the 1850's. It is important as a sophisticated blend of academic and regional design elements, practically executed with the best available local building materials. The building has been altered little since its construction in 1856.
186. Riverview, built circa 1847, is the most outstanding of Greek Revival architecture in Columbus in its monumental scale and richness of interior design.
187. First National Bank of Greenville was the first federally-chartered bank in Washington County, and is today one of the oldest federally-chartered banks in continuous operation in the state.
188. The Briars is considered the most fully developed and sophisticated example of the long, low "undercut" architectural form indigenous to the lower Mississippi Valley. The residence is also significant for being the setting in 1845, of the marriage of Jefferson Davis and Varina Howell.*
189. Chickasaw Village Site is the most significant of the numerous sites associated with Chickasaw history between Line Creek in Mississippi and Duck River in Tennessee. The site was the center of the Chickasaw villages and settlements of the eighteenth century.*
190. Elms Court was constructed circa 1836, and is a significant and well-preserved example of the Greek Revival style. It is one of the most prominent "suburban villas" in the Natchez region.*
191. Christ Church, constructed in 1858 for the first Episcopal congregation in the state, is revered as the "cradle of Episcopacy in Mississippi." Succeeding two earlier church buildings, the existing one is among the best-documented structures in the state.
192. The Sprague is the largest and most powerful steam tow-boat ever constructed. The Sprague is also significant for its role in the development of commerce and transportation during the first quarter of the twentieth century.
193. The Cedars is one of the oldest houses extant in Clinton and Hinds County. The Cedars is typical of the simple but spacious vernacular form of Greek Revival cottage once popular in Mississippi. Its exact date of construction is unknown, but land records indicate that there was a structure on the site by 1839, and architectural evidence places the period of the house at 1835–1850.
194. Hickory Sticks reflects the history of Columbus, Mississippi's settlement, growth, and development. Certain features of the grounds suggest that there may have been some prehistoric settlement here. The nineteenth century house represents, in its two phases of construction, two important periods of Columbus history. The builders of the house, as well as subsequent owners, occupied prominent positions in the growing Tombigbee River community.
195. The Old Natchez Trace at milepost 198 goes down a small hill on the west side of the parkway.
196. The Old Natchez Trace crosses and recrosses the Kosciusko-French Camp road. The present road has here closely followed the original trace.
197. The Old Natchez Trace, Ridgeland vicinity, Madison County, Mississippi, is grown up with pine trees and undergrowth and has high banks. Near here Turner Brashers operated an inn beginning in 1806.
198. The Old Natchez Trace, Port Gibson vicinity, Claiborne County, Mississippi, was historically known as Grindstone Ford. This is an interpretive site on the Natchez Trace and there are exhibits telling of the Trace and Grindstone Ford. At the time of the Civil War there was a bridge at the crossing, but it has since been destroyed.
199. The Old Natchez Trace, Port Gibson vicinity, Claiborne County, Mississippi, is in about the same condition as it was when it was abandoned with the exception of some erosion and vegetative cover that is growing on the trail.*
200. Robinson Road construction began in late summer or early fall of 1821 to connect the isolated counties of Lowndes and Monroe with the rest of the state.
201. Routhland was the home of John Routh, "at one time the largest cotton planter in the world," and was once owned by Charles Clark, the Civil War governor of Mississippi.*
202. The Sweethome Mound site consists of what appears to have been a conical mound situated on a sandy ridge on the inside curve of the Tallahatchie River.*
203. Ayer Hall, constructed in 1903 as the first academic building on the Jackson College (JSU) campus, is today the only extant original structure on the grounds of this institution and is significant for its role in the development of education for black Mississippians.*
204. The Corners, completed in 1873, is a highly individual architectural composition which includes elements of several styles. The house was built by John A. Klein as a wedding gift to his daughter, Susan, who married Captain Isaac Bonham on May 7, 1873.*
