This work is a result of research sponsored by the Michigan Sea Grant Program, project number R/R4, with a grant, NA-80-AA-D-00072, from the Office of Sea Grant, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), U.S. Department of Commerce, and funds from the State of Michigan. This project was also partially funded by the Agricultural Experiment Station, Michigan State University.

Introduction

Michigan is a land of many lakes and, of course, the Great Lakes. Water resources in Michigan offer extensive recreation and pleasure boating opportunities. Recreation delivery systems have grown in proportion to the increase in water-based activities. One of the prime industries serving the boater interested in using water resources is the marina. In Michigan there are almost 500 Great Lakes marinas and more than 500 inland marinas.

This list of marina names and addresses was developed as a product of the Sea Grant project: "The Perceived Influence of Fuel Price and Availability Upon Great Lakes Boating Behavior Among Urban Michigan Boaters." Marina operators were contacted to assess how energy was affecting their business and their customers. To draw a sample of marina operations to survey, this list was developed.

List Development

The list was compiled by studying and reviewing a series of other lists provided by several sources. These included:

Gene Dice, Program Leader, Marine Advisory Service, Michigan Sea Grant, Michigan State University. The list supplied by Dr. Dice was developed from two other sources; a list from the Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Waterways Division and a list from the Michigan Boating Industries Association. These lists were merged into one, which was used for mailings for Sea Grant functions and conferences.

Steve Reck, Department of Public Health. This listing resulted from permits which are issued for the development of sewage pumpout stations at marinas around the state.

Mark Feldhauser, Mo Nealsen and Brad Wilkins, DNR, Land Resources Division, provided the final list which is a by-product of their work with the Great Lakes Submerged Lands Act and the Inland Lakes and Streams Act.

It is assumed that these sources have provided recent, comprehensive and accurate information.

From the lists mentioned above, a new listing was developed and prepared in rough draft. This draft was sent to those individuals mentioned above plus the Michigan Sea Grant Extension Agents and the Waterways Division, DNR. Edited drafts were returned and used to complete a final edition.

The list was edited in two other ways. First, it was used as a mailing list for the annual Michigan Marina Managers Conference held in December 1981. The addresses or "dead letters" which were returned were removed from the list. Finally, during the phone survey of marinas, incorrect or inappropriate addresses were eliminated or revised. Short of actually field checking every marina in the state, this list is presumably the most comprehensive, accurate and current list now available.

This list of names and addresses has many uses. As noted by Crompton, Beardsley, and Ditton (1976), such a list is useful to trade and business organizations which have a vested interest in boating, recreation, and marina industries. While only a crude beginning, this does represent a base upon which to build a more complete inventory and assessment of the slip space and services available to the users of Michigan's water resources.

A marina was defined as any facility which stores water craft, has at least one wet storage space, and has access to navigable waters in Michigan. Those marinas with access to Great Lakes waters have GL entered beside the marina name. Wet storage means that the facility has slip, mooring, or dock space available on the water surface. Again, site checking of facilities was not possible, and so it is difficult to know if all marinas included on the list do indeed meet this definition. In fact, errors are sure to appear, but we hope, with further editing, research, and more information about marina facilities, a more complete list will be developed.

Updating the List

The accuracy and completeness of an inventory is short-lived. The marina industry is constantly changing, and efforts to update and revise the list will be made periodically. To assist in future revisions, the names and addresses have been stored on a Mag-Card typewriter system. Also, the last page of this listing outlines a procedure for users, researchers, businesses, organizations and agencies to submit additional entries, corrections and deletions.

Summary of Results

A review of the completed list reveals that there are 469 marinas with access to the Great Lakes and 548 marinas on inland lakes and streams. The total comes to 1,017 marinas, with Great Lakes facilities comprising 46 percent of the total (Table 1).

St. Clair County had the largest number of marinas (117), and 17 counties had no marinas registered. Most Michigan marina facilities are located in the lower peninsula; 92 percent of the Great Lakes facilities and 94 percent of inland facilities are located in the lower peninsula. The Detroit River/ Lake St. Clair area has the largest number of Great Lakes facilities, with 173, or 37 percent of the Great Lakes marinas over-all. Lake Michigan had 32 percent of Michigan marinas followed by Lake Huron (15 percent), Lake Erie (7 percent) and Lake Superior (7 percent).
