

Supplement of Earth Syst. Dynam., 10, 45–57, 2019
<https://doi.org/10.5194/esd-10-45-2019-supplement> © Author(s) 2019. This work is distributed under the Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 License.

Supplement of

Predicting near-term variability in ocean carbon uptake

Nicole S. Lovenduski et al.

Correspondence to: Nicole S. Lovenduski (nicole.lovenduski@colorado.edu)

The copyright of individual parts of the supplement might differ from the CC BY 4.0 License.

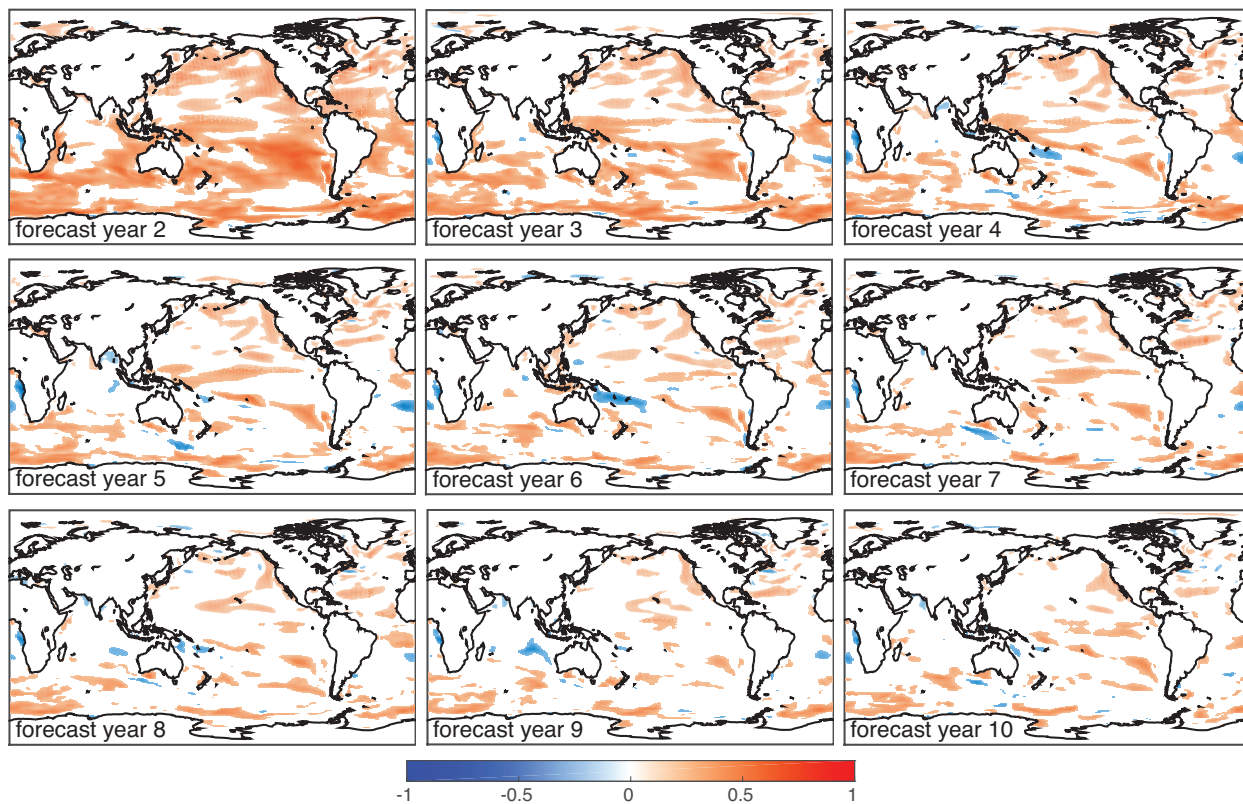

Figure S1. Predictability of air-sea CO₂ flux, as indicated by the correlation coefficient of detrended, air-sea CO₂ flux anomalies from the CESM-DPLE initialized forecast for a range of lead years with the reconstruction. Correlation coefficients that are not statistically significant at the 95% level using a t test are assigned a value of zero.